

Our technological innovations drive the energy market. With our digital expertise and market know-how we actively promote the energy transition. Likron has a stable and sustainable business model with exceptional growth potential, allowing us to operate in a highly competitive environment for over 10 years. We place particular emphasis on agility and openness in our collaboration.

Join us in making the energy markets ready for the future. Our international team of over 40 experts is looking for a

Trading Application Specialist (m/w/d)

Your responsibilities and tasks	What you need to succeed
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Handle customer support issues for our trading applications via email and phone (1st level and 2nd level support).• Communicate with energy traders and desk developers that are using our services and their APIs.• Manage technical onboarding projects for new services and configuration changes for existing services.• Help improve our support setup by extending the documentation, by recognizing patterns in support cases, and by initiating and coordinating improvements for tools and processes.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• A degree in technology, economics, natural science, or related field. Alternatively, relevant work experience.• Good understanding of exchanges. Experience from private trading activities is a plus.• Understanding of databases (SQL), Git, and software development processes.• Highly service-oriented, can-do mindset and proven problem-solving skills.• Excellent communication skills, both in English and German.• Motivation to grow in a challenging and exciting environment.• Being able to work well within a team while at the same time taking individual responsibility.

Why you should join the LIKRON Team

Innovative company with growth potential

Attractive salary with profit-sharing

Creative work environment with great training opportunities

30 days annual leave

Flexible working hours and working from home

We are looking forward to your application!

If this sounds interesting to you, please send your application documents to career@likron.de